

Did you know?

By Gordon Seavey

The Abbot Middle School is considered one of the town's prettiest public buildings, or can we say the prettiest? Its dainty cupola or tower of a Georgian Colonial style architecture can be seen rising above the trees from many distant places.

Before he retired, head custodian Leo Larkin always lit a red bulb to shine from the cupola during the Christmas season. This custom has been revived thanks to a sentimental townsman who paid for the necessary wiring and timeclock to continue this much appreciated yearly event.

Now, let's change the bulb to white, to act as a little beacon through the nights!
