Ideal site for nature lovers

Letter to the Editor

Several years ago, the late Miss Marian Winnek deeded to the town (for the town speople's use) a valuable chunk of land, which ever since has lain idle The tract consists of 36 acres, running from has now grown up to brush, poison ivy and scrub trees It could be made into a very attractive conservation area for nature lovers replacing the

Main Street near Mille Fleurs to the top of Prospect Hill and including what was once a clay pet and pottery works in Colonial days. This land trash growth with secluded walks and encouraging wild flowers · From the summit of Prospect Hill (once called Clay Pit Hill) one gets a tremendous view of the here that the old Westford Water Company stationed its first water tower in 1909

A good project, especially in view of the town's recent 250th anniversary, for a civic minded group to take over

Gordon B Seavey

28 Depot Street

surrounding countryside It is the highest point in Westford (450 feet above sea level) and it was