

Wanderings

continued from page 10

When time was on their hands and without the aid of mechanized equipment brute strength and a pair of oxen did the trick usually in the off season

Edwin Way Teale the excellent naturalist historian estimates that in New England alone there are at least 100 000 miles of stone walls In mileage this adds up to at least 33 trips across the country Teale's books are in the local library